In every programme, we send one famous person and three journalists from celebrity magazines to spend a weekend together alone in a house. During this time, the journalists are required to find out as much information as they can about the celebrity in question because, after the weekend is up, they will be required to write the biography of their famous subject during the following week. When the biography is finished, the celebrity will read it and give his or her opinion about it: in other words, whether it is an 'authorized' biography or an 'UNauthorized' biography.
